Milos Jekic decided he wanted to be a lawyer while he was still in high school. He was drawn to the variety that comes with being a lawyer, and enjoys getting to know a client's particular situation and needs. His goal is to provide you with practical and straightforward advice to solve your unique challenges. He has a wide range of experience representing both small startups and larger, more established companies. This makes him a unique Kansas City attorney that can help you no matter what size company you are.

A deep understanding of technology and intellectual property. While many lawyers intentionally avoid technology and intellectual property matters, Milos enjoys the challenges of working in such unique areas of the law. Specifically, he works with multiple clients on intellectual property matters related to copyright, trademark, and unfair competition, including facilitating strategic management and growth of domestic and foreign trademark portfolios; licensing and monetization of intellectual property assets; trademark clearance, prosecution, maintenance, and enforcement; and copyright registration, maintenance, and enforcement. Milos has also drafted and negotiated numerous agreements that focus on intellectual property and technology issues, including licensing, development, master services, reseller, and confidentiality agreements. Further, if you are building and running websites and mobile apps, he can help ensure you have the proper terms of use, privacy policies, and other legal disclaimers posted to keep your business safe. Related, he loves using technology in his legal practice. This makes him more efficient and a better partner all-around.

The business law experience you need. Milos also has experience working with a variety of businesses on asset purchases, stock purchases, mergers, and more. Representative transactions include:

- $21 million sale of assets of a company that manufactures, sells, and installs stone veneers;
- $50 million sale of a physician practice to a private-equity-sponsored buyer, including an extensive pre-closing restructuring of operations of the practice in order to facilitate the completion of the purchase transaction;
- Purchase of all of the stock of a company that sells passive thermal protection products and provides associated services;
- Merger and reorganization of an accounting practice to restructure and facilitate more flexible business operations.

In addition to his transactional expertise, Milos provides a broad range of services related to business operations, ownership, and management. And when working with corporate clients, Milos uses his IP and technology knowledge to give them well-rounded legal advice. Working with Milos means you get practical, pragmatic, straightforward legal counsel in an attentive and user-friendly manner.
